UK Volunteers Project

Thirteen students from Action Southern Africa (ACTSA) in the UK approached Coca-Cola UK to find out how they could become involved at Coca-Cola South Africa and assist in worthwhile projects. The organisation used to help fight apartheid in South Africa and over the years has affiliated itself with a range of NGOs to help rebuild the country. The students, who are youth leaders from various communities, were hosted by CCSA on Friday, June 13, when they spent the day at Zenzeleni Children and Youth Village in Orange Farm, which is home to 28 AIDS orphans. The students assisted by donating mattresses, blankets and sheets. They also had lots of fun painting the children's sleeping quarters.

Afterwards, the students visited the Coca-Cola Canners plant for a presentation on the HIV/Aids Workplace Policy and to tour the plant.

"On behalf of the students on the trip, and the Coca-Cola GB team, a huge, huge thank you for all the work, energy and enthusiasm you put in to make Friday's trip such a huge success. It really was a great day, and the feedback was excellent. It is this type of trip that really helps dispel some of the myths that exist about TCCC in the UK and Europe, and really help us drive forward corporate reputation. And this couldn't happen without the collaboration between business units that was shown here.

Thank you to Tuli and everyone at CCSA and the Canners for making the day so successful." – Euan Wilmshurst, Manager Stakeholder Engagement, The Coca-Cola Company, London.
